

3-Course Cook-Off

— and other — things to do on a RAINY DAY

by Composition 1206

Whether it's the weekend or the middle of vacation, a rainy day can leave you with canceled or postponed plans, wondering what's next.

Here are three things to consider:

1. Three-Course Cook-Off

How you plan this depends on how many people are involved and whether or not they know how to cook. As a group, plan your three-course meal. Together you can search for recipes, shop for ingredients, schedule the prep, and decide what time to eat. You can cook together or pick teams for each course. And when the food's ready, you can all sit down to a memorable meal.

2. Listen to a Story

Story time isn't just for little ones. There are audiobook versions of classic titles and new releases, and podcasts that cover all sorts of topics.

The key to the best listening experience is a good story and the voice of the narrator. One of my all-time favorites is Hatchet by Gary Paulsen. It's not too long, the narration is spot on, and it's loaded with suspense.

Listen to the book chapter by chapter; for half-an-hour at a time; or just before bedtime.

3. Play a Game of Cards

I've never been much of a card player, but the game Sevens changed my mind. It's easy to learn, generates some competitive play, and doesn't take too long. If you like it, you can play another round, or find a different game. Here's a link to instructions.

At Composition 1206, we are information architects. If you have information to share and want to be sure it reads well and makes you proud, let's talk.

We design and edit:
websites • books • presentations

COMPOSITION
1206

Let's talk!

composition1206.com

Call 207.252.9757 or email us today.